TREASURER.—Aaron H. Kerr.

SEXTON.—Wm. F. Bebout.

IN the Spring of 1890 the subject of more room for the burial of the dead began to be agitated; on May 11, 1890, the Rev. J. P. Anderson, then pastor of the Presbyterian Church, preached on "Care and Disposal of the Dead." A meeting of interested persons was called, and resulted in the formation of a Cemetery Company, which procured a perpetual charter under the laws of Pennsylvania, purchased 5 acres of land on the Lee farm, laid it out in lots, avenues and alleys, which lots are sold at a price deemed sufficient to always keep them in order.

On Dec. 17, 1892, at a congregational meeting called for the purpose of considering what should be done in regard to the preservation of the old graveyard, the following preamble and resolutions were offered and unanimously agreed to:

"WHEREAS, The old graveyard connected with this church and used for burial for more than a century, has become so fully occupied that it is almost impossible to dig a grave in any part without unlawfully disturbing the long interred remains of some person; and

WHEREAS, A new cemetery belonging to an incorporated company has been successfully started in the immediate vicinity of the old, and it is feared that from non-usage the old yard will become neglected and fall to ruin and decay unless something is done now to preserve it; therefore RESOLVED, 1ST. That the Board of Trustees of this congregation be authorized and instructed to take measures as it may deem best to raise by popular subscription, or donation, a fund, to be called THE GRAVEYARD FUND, sufficient to place the old yard in proper repair; and to invest a fund for its sole use, the income from which shall be devoted to keeping the old yard in proper repair and properly adorned.

. 2ND.¹ That as Mr. James Simpson, who has devoted much time and has given much attention for many years to the interments made in the old yard, is now recognized as the best living authority on the history of it, he be requested to prepare a brief history for publication, and that the Board of Trustees be directed to have the same published in pamphlet form for sale and gratuitous distribution among contributors, and that in the pamphlet be an appeal made to all persons who feel any interest in the proper preservation of the old yard to contribute to this fund."

At the same meeting a motion was made and carried that a lithographic picture of Mr. Simpson be placed in the book. At same meeting a committee of nine persons was appointed by the congregation to assist the Board of Trustees in raising this fund, the committee consisting of W. W. Jackson, John S. Patterson, Thomas M. Johnson, J. Morgan Sharp, Robert Anderson, A. H. Kerr, William G. White, John White and Robertson J. Lyle.

At a subsequent meeting of Trustees and Committee it was ordered that the names of donors to fund and amounts contributed be published in the History; and also that the inscriptions on all headstones and monuments be copied.

At a congregational meeting held for the purpose on Saturday, September 16, 1893, Rules and Regulations for the care of the graveyard were adopted, and ordered to be printed in Mr. Simpson's book.

T a congregational meeting of Cross Creek Presbyterian Congregation, held at the church on Saturday, September 16, 1893, the Board of Trustees laid before the meeting the following rules which were adopted by the Congregation, and ordered to be printed in the History of the Graveyard now in course of preparation:

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR GUIDANCE IN CROSS CREEK GRAVEYARD.

I. The care, general oversight, and control of the old GRAVEYARD attached to this church shall at all times be vested in the Board of Trustees of this congregation, who shall appoint, whenever necessary, a suitable person for Superintendent under their direction, who may be removed at any time; and it shall be the duty of said Board of Trustees, either as a body, or by a committee of themselves and the Superintendent of the Graveyard, to see that these Rules and Regulations are at all times faithfully carried out.

II. All shrubs and trees now growing in the Graveyard exceeding seven feet in height shall be trimmed back within that height, or if such trimming is impracticable, then removed; and no tree or shrub shall hereafter be allowed to exceed that height.

III. Whenever a fund is provided which the Board of Trustees deems sufficient to properly care for all time to come, for the entire yard, then all spreading or propagating vines, shrubs, bushes, weeds and everything detrimental to the beauty or fitness of the yard shall be totally eradicated or killed; all headstones kept straight; all hillocks removed; all depressions filled up; no mound over a grave to exceed three inches in height, and the whole yard to be well seeded with grass seeds, and at all times to be kept properly mowed and trimmed. And they shall invest the surplus of said FUND in a safe and secure place, and keep it so invested, so that the annual income arising therefrom shall keep the yard at all times in good order and repair; and shall not at any time suffer any portion of the fund, nor income, to be diverted to other uses.

IV. All persons interested are requested to plant and cultivate proper trees, shrubs and flowers, and otherwise adorn the yard, or graves that they are interested in, but no tree, shrub, vine, flower, or anything else that reproduces, or spreads from the root, branch or seed, shall be allowed in the yard, without the sanction of the Board of Trustees, or Committee and Superintendent, and if such are planted the Superintendent is directed to remove them.

V. All persons are prohibited from plucking any flower, either wild or cultivated, breaking or injuring any tree, plant or shrub without leave from proper authority, or in any way marking, defacing or injuring any monument or stone.

VI. Children will not be allowed in the yard, unless accompanied by some person who will be responsible for their conduct.

VII. No person will be permitted to disturb the quiet and good order of the place in any way.

VIII. If any person or persons at any time, in digging a grave, shall come upon, or in any manner interfere with any old grave, they shall immediately cease digging and properly fill up the excavation already made.

THE first interment in the old Graveyard of Cross Creek was in the year 1779, soon after the call was signed calling the Rev. Joseph Smith, which is dated June the 21st, 1779; and in that year Robert McCready, Esq., drove the stake where they built the church. This first interment was that of a little child of David and Sarah Vance*, who lived where David Gault, Esq., now resides. It had fallen in the fire and was so badly burned that it soon after died. A council was held with the neighbors and friends as to where they would bury it, when it was agreed to inter it in the woods up where they were going to build the church. Thomas Crawford and his wife Judith, who then resided on the Hays farm, near the Beech Knob School House, attended the funeral. In the evening when they returned home Crawford's mother, who resided with him, whose name was Margaret Shearer, a very aged woman, asked, "Where did they bury the child?" On being told, "Where they are going to build the church," she threw up her hands and said, "Oh, there is a graveyard started and I know I'll be the next to go into it!" In a short time she was taken sick and died and was buried under the old white oak tree that stood till lately on the south side of the yard. Her son, Thomas Crawford, died in June, 1783, on the William Perry farm, and was buried by her side. His life was an eventful one, as he and his elder brother, Oliver, spent nine years in captivity among the Indians on the Scioto, in what is now the State of Ohio. Their mother paid four hundred dollars to an Indian trader for their ransom. In the spring of 1782 Samuel Robison and William Parks were buried in one day. They were both killed and scalped by the Indians. Judge James Edgar made all these coffins:—for the Vance child, for Mrs. Shearer, Thomas Crawford, and for Robison and Parks.

On the 17th of February, 1782, Robert Wallace, who resided one mile east of Florence, where Samuel McConnell now resides, was from home at a mill. In his absence a band of Indians attacked his house, took his wife and babe and two other boys captive, shot his cows, burned his cabin and left. When Wallace returned he found his home in ruins and his family gone. A party of whites followed the trail till dark, but in the night a snow fell, so that they could follow the trail no longer. The Indians took the north direction to the Ohio River. In the evening late Mrs. Wallace gave out and was tomahawked and scalped, and the little child also shared the same fate. The other two lads were taken on. The remains of Mrs. Wallace were left to the beasts of prey. Wallace, thinking that his wife was held in captivity among the Indians, came to Cross Creek, to Marshall's Fort, to get Col. James Marshall to intercede with Gen. Wm. Irvine at Fort Pitt, and have him intercede with Gen. Washington, so that his wife might be exchanged or ransomed. This Gen. Irvine did not do, as he said Cornwallis had now surrendered and we would soon have peace, and giving other reasons, did not make the request to Washington as Wallace wished him. He repaired to his home sad and heavy. At this time the settlers were organizing the expedition to go to Gnadenhutten to remove the Moravian Indians further west or bring them again to Fort Pitt. Wallace was not long in making up his mind to go along, and go he did. When the little army under the command of Col. David Williamson arrived there, Wallace found the dress that his wife had on when she was taken prisoner among the plunder in the Moravian town. They had got it in trade from the hostile Indians on their return home that way. On Wallace finding this covered with blood he became, as others said, a mad man. His rage was terrible and also that of the others with him. This was conclusive. The vote was taken and but 16, some say 18, voted to spare the lives of the 96 innocent creatures. Wallace went with the executioners and did not fail to act his part with tomahawk and knife. Thomas Marshall, who was long an elder of Old Cross Creek, and who died near New Athens, O., in 1839, aged 96 years, was along with the militia, but did not take part in the killing. He told Capt. Lysander Patterson (yet living) that after the slaughter was over he was seated on a log. Wallace came up to him and sat down beside him stained with the blood of the slain. He said, "It may be that we have done wrong, but I could not help it," and then wept like a little child. Wallace came home with the troops, bringing his wife's dress along. It was kept for long years afterward. In 1783 some hunters found what they were sure were the bones of a white person near Hookstown, Beaver Co., Pa. Wallace was told of it, and going to the spot, found them and recognized them as those of his wife by the teeth. He gathered them up and often went back afterward, still finding some more. After keeping them for two years in a salt sack hung up at the head of his bed, he brought them to Cross Creek and buried them. An old field stone with "M. W." in large letters was supposed to mark her grave. It stood near the center of the yard, but has disappeared. No doubt it was removed by some vandal to make the foundation for some other monument. Mrs. Wallace's maiden name was Mary Grant. Mr. Wallace got one of his sons back after peace was restored. The other was never heard of. Robert, the one that returned, died in 1855, an aged man, and is buried at the Covenanter Churchyard, near Venice, Washington Co., Pa. Mr. Wallace married again and raised another family. He was long afterwards an elder of Cross Roads Church. He died in 1808 and is buried at Florence, Washington Co., Pa.

*A somewhat remarkable coincidence is that the first interment made in the new cemetery at this place was a child of Leander Vance, a relative of the first interment in the old yard.

Thus we see that the finding of the dress of Mrs. Wallace caused the murder of the 96 innocent Moravian Indians the 8th of March, 1782; and this shows that the remains of three are buried in Cross Creek that fell by the hand of the Indians, namely: Samuel Robison, William Parks and Mary Grant Wallace. In 1828, in digging the grave for John Campbell, an old grave was taken up which was recognized by Mr. John Graham as that of William Parks, who was killed by the Indians. He was a boy at the time and had seen Parks buried. He could tell by the nails that the coffin had been made with. Judge Edgar, who made the coffins in that day, used nails that were made by a blacksmith. Wm. Stevenson, who died in 1865, told the writer that he helped to dig Campbell's grave and he kept some of the nails for relics.

Mary Robison, the widow of Samuel Robison, died March 27th, 1809, aged 66 years. An old stone marks her grave in good preservation. There is an old field stone beside it with the letter R cut on it. It is supposed to mark her husband's grave.

An old gentleman told the writer that about the year 1818 he was

At the funeral of David Hays in 1793 Robert Lyle and Joseph Vance were appointed to ride in front of the funeral cortege, which was going to Cross Creek. Soon after starting their conversation turned to the Moravian massacre. Lyle denounced it as a murder and an act of barbarism. Mr. Vance then said that that expedition was planned in his cabin; but said "We did not go out there to kill them, but intended to either make them remove further west or bring them again to Fort Pitt, so that the hostile Indians could not have it as a stopping-place in making their invasions on the settlers; but on finding some plunder belonging to the Wallace family covered with blood, and other articles belonging to other parties, the men could no longer be restrained, and so followed the dreadful massacre of the whole 96 Moravian Indians."

helping to dig a grave near the lower side of the yard. They came down on a walnut slab or puncheon. On lifting it a large skeleton was discovered under it. It had been encased around with walnut slabs that were really green. He told some old settlers about it. They said it was the grave of a man by the name of Paul who had died at an early day, and they had split walnut slabs and set around the coffin in place of digging a vault, as they did in those days.

There is an old field stone near the north-east corner of the yard that has "E. A., died in her 99th year," on it. Whose is it? No one at the present day can tell. It marks the resting place of some one who has long since passed away. We have found about one thousand that are buried on this sacred old hill, but we have not got the one-half that are interred.

IN addition to the inscriptions on monuments and headstones, we have put in the names of many persons buried here when we could get reliable information as to name, date of death and age; but there are many hundred interred here who are now entirely forgotten. No record of their names, dates of their deaths, or burials exist. Of the early settlers of this community, the dust of many of them repose here. Their names should be in our list, but are now forever lost. The writer has endeavored to extend this list as much as possible to perpetuate their names. There are many old Revolutionary soldiers buried here. So far as known the fact has been noted, but alas! the names and final resting place of many of those old heroes are now unknown.

Of late years the bones, or dust, of many of the first interred have been unchristianly disturbed to make room for later interments. It is hoped this desecration will no longer be allowed. We all desire Christian burial when the time for our burial comes. Can any corpse receive Christian burial in a desecrated, dishonored grave? Have not the ashes of those persons who risked their lives to rescue this goodly land from dangerous wild animals and more savage Indians, and by their toil and privations subdued the forest and made the earth to yield forth her fruits in due season, a sacred right to repose, undisturbed, until the sounding of the trumpet when all will be called to judgment?

Do not we, who now live in peace, ease and comfort, enjoy the fruits and reap the rewards of the toil and privations of those bold, hardy pioneers, owe it to their memory to keep green and beautify the place of their last repose? Perhaps some say, "I have no relatives buried there and do not feel bound to contribute." Do you not occupy the land those early settlers subdued, and do you not reap the benefit of their danger, toil, labor and privations, unharassed by the midnight, blood-curdling yell of the stealthy, murderous, savage redskin, the howling of the ferocious wild animal, or the hissing rattle of the venomous serpent?

The first inclosure of the graveyard was made by a worm rail fence, afterwards replaced by a post and rail fence, which was replaced in 1836 by a pine board fence, the boards planed, jointed and nailed close together on locust posts set six feet apart, and the outside painted. This fence being occasionally repaired, lasted until 1875, when the present neat and substantial pine board, locust post fence was built. The funds to build the last two fences were raised by voluntary subscription. When the fence was built in 1836 the northern and western boundaries were extended as far as they could be for the public roads.

Before erecting the fence in 1875, court was petitioned, a view granted, and the road north of the graveyard was vacated, and the fence set in the road; on the south side a strip of land used as a private road and hitching ground, was inclosed. This strip, although very unsuitable, being low, and wet from the wash accumulating above, has been and is used for interring in but soon will be all occupied.

Hon. James Edgar, who was one of the first Judges of the Court in Washington county, made the first coffins, and was the first undertaker in this neighborhood. He worked at cabinet making for some years, and was probably the first mechanic to work at that trade in this vicinity. William Wallace, who lived on the farm now occupied by James Manson, near Mt. Prospect Church, next was the coffin maker for this region. He made them as early as 1791. He was succeeded about 1820 by his son Oliver, who lived on the David Gault farm, near Nosco School House. He was succeeded about 1827 by William Reed, who lived in Cross Creek Village, and continued at the business until 1836, and I have heard him say that he made more than one hundred interments in that yard. He was followed by William Donehoo, who carried on the business until his death in 1864, after which the business was carried on for about five years by his son, D. M. Donehoo, Esq., now of Washington, Pa. Henry W. Donehoo then took up the business, which he still carries on.

David Woods, of Cross Creek Village, made some coffins; Ross Gilbert, of near Burgettstown, made some interments here. John Sampson, of West Middletown, buried a good many corpses from the region in that direction. George Elliott, Esq., who lived near Bethel Church, in Jefferson Township, made quite a number of coffins for families in that vicinity. W. W. Wiegman, of Patterson's Mills, has made a good many interments in this old yard.

Prior to 1860 undertakers generally made their own coffins: since that they generally get caskets from the factories.

There was a tradition among the old people that Henry Graham, Esq., donated the land to the congregation upon which the church and graveyard now are. The records show that on December 18, 1795, Henry Graham, Esq., and Mary his wife, for and in consideration of 6£ lawful money of said state, (6£ Pennsylvania currency being equivalent to $16.00 U. S. money), deeded six acres one fourth and thirty-four perches to Samuel Fleming, Aaron Lyle and John Wilkin, Trustees, for the use of the congregation.

It appears that the land upon which the church is built belonged to the Graham Patent; but prior to September 28, 1791, the land on which the graveyard is located belonged to Samuel and Robert Purveys, it being at that time deeded by the Sheriff of Washington county to Hugh Henry Breckinridge, and conveyed March 24, 1794, by Hugh Henry Breckinridge to Henry Graham, Esq., by deed recorded in Deed Book K, page 148.

In 1890 the subject of securing more ground for burial purposes occupied the minds of the people of this community and resulted in the formation of an undenominational company which procured a charter under the corporation laws of Pennsylvania, styled "The Cross Creek Cemetery Company," secured five acres of land of the Maj. Lee farm, had part of it laid out in avenues, alleys and lots, in regular order; have many of the lots neatly marked with marble markers in front and iron markers at rear of lots. All the lots front on either a 16-foot avenue or a 6-foot alley, so that a person can go upon any lot in the cemetery without trespassing upon any other. Already the bones of James Dinsmore, R. T. Johnson, Samuel Allen, and Thos. P. Vance, aged and respected citizens of the community, repose on their own lots in this cemetery. Several younger persons have also been interred here. Here a person, as did Abraham of old, mentioned in the 23rd chapter of Genesis, may purchase his own lot, and forever be secure from molestation in his grave by others being interred on top of him.

It is against the PRINCIPLES of a cemetery company to allow one interment upon the top of another, and also against their INTEREST: it is to their interest to sell more lots. The income derived from the sale of these lots, and from other sources, is to be expended in beautifying and adorning the grounds.

NOTE.—He was the renowned Judge Edgar who figured so conspicuously in the early annals of Washington County, and of Cross Creek Presbyterian Church. Born in York County, Pa., in 1744, married to Martha Smiley, sister of Wm. Smiley of note as the person sent to New Orleans about 1787 by the churches of Upper Buffalo and Cross Creek with a flatboat load of flour, to pay the salary of Rev. Joseph Smith), about the year 1787. In 1776 he was a member of the convention which met in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, that hastened the Declaration of Independence; and in same year served in the State Constitutional Convention. In 1777 was a member of Board of Council from York Co.; in 1778 he removed to what is now Washington County, settling on a farm now owned by Samuel Scott, about 4 miles northeast of Cross Creek Village. In 1779 he was elected as one of the first Board of Elders of Cross Creek Presbyterian Church, and through his influence Rev. Joseph Smith, of York Co., was called to the pastorate of Cross Creek and Upper Buffalo Churches; was nine times Moderator of Presbytery. In 1781 he and Col. John Canon were elected to, and served as first members from Washington County, in the State Supreme Executive Council; about the same time he was elected and commissioned Justice of the Peace, which office he long held. In 1783 he was, according to Penna. archives, elected County Treasurer of Washington County; in 1787 he, with Col. James Marshall, Gen. John Neville and Thomas Scott, were elected members from Washington County to the special State Convention to consider the Federal Constitution, which Constitution was ratified by the convention on Dec. 13, 1787, by a vote of 46 to 23, Pennsylvania being the second State to ratify the U. S. Constitution. In 1791 he was made one of the Associate Judges for Washington County. During the Whisky Rebellion he took strong grounds against the rebellion, and at Brownsville addressed a large meeting in a very strong speech in favor of upholding the law, and but few of his neighbors took part in the rebellion.

He emigrated from Scotland in the year 1772, when 20 years old. In 1773 he volunteered in the Army of the Revolution, in what was called the Flying Camp, where he saw hard service for his country's cause during that memorable year. In the spring of 1777 he came out to Pittsburgh with a friend and came out from there and bought and settled on what is yet known as the old McCready farm, in Jefferson township, Washington Co., Pa. Here his cabin stood on the frontier, and here he had to battle with the Indians till 1783. He was in many hard scrimages and fights with them. In 1779 he picked the site and drove the stake for the Church of Cross Creek, and in the history of his life, which he wrote in his own hand, he said he helped to clear and fence the graveyard with his own hand. In 1792 he was chosen one of the ruling elders for the Church of Cross Creek, which position he held till his death. He was for more than half a century a justice of the peace. In the War of 1812 he served as adjutant in a short campaign. Like the Father of his Country, he was "first in war and first in peace."

It will be seen by the foregoing list that there has not been as much money raised as was desired. As the old yard will all have to be dug over by hand and leveled up, and the vines and bushes eradicated, it will cost a considerable sum to put it in order. Whatever money is raised from the sale of this book over the expenses of publishing it will be devoted to the fund. If any persons feel like making further contributions, they are earnestly requested to do so soon, as when a sufficient amount is raised, then contributions will not be desired. Until the supply is exhausted, the book can be obtained by addressing TREASURER GRAVEYARD FUND, Cross Creek Village, Washington Co., Pa.

ADDENDA.

Additions to List of Persons Buried Here, but of whom no Authentic Dates can be given, beginning on page 71:

Infant son of Robert and Ann Simpson—1823.

SYLVESTER STEVENSON.

The following have been dug up in clearing off the old Graveyard:

In memory of JULIANN, wife of Thomas McFarland, who departed this life Dec., 1837, in the 20th year of her age.

MARTHA PATTERSON, daughter of I. and J. Fleming, died April 1st, 1841, aged 40 years.

AGNES CUNNINGHAM, died ———, 1839, aged 59 years.

The Committee that has been clearing off the old Graveyard has unearthed many old field stones that have letters and dates cut rudely on them, as follows:

O. R. 1791.

M. R. 1809.

S. B. 1800.
